FOR STATE TREASURER,

Of McLean County.

FOR SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
NEWTON BATEMAN,
Of Morgan County.

Election on Tuesday the 2d day of November.

The Belly and the Members.

A great deal of pother has been kicked up at Washington by the announcement that our Monsieur Belly, a thrifty scion of Johnny Crapaud, has concluded an alliance, treaty, contract or what not, with the Government of Nicaragua, monopolizing the transit route, assuming a Protectorate over Central America and doing several other off-hand jobs which the modern Gauls are distinguished for. Monsieur Sartiges, who represents the French Court at the Federal City, on being interrogated, denies point-blank that Louis Napoleon has any interest in the Belly Protectorate, near or remote, direct or contingent. Hence we are at liberty to infer that Mr. Belly has done the whole business himself, and if the gravity of the subject does not forbid, that he is like the old Cardinal of Harry VIII, "a man of an unbounded stomach." Exactly how far his wings may be spread over the Isthmus, we are not informed, but quite likely he has undertaken the management of most of the Central American States not already sheltered by Great Britain. Not to put too fine a point upon it, in this particular doubtless Esq. Belly more nearly resembles the Moor of Venice, in having "stomach for them all." What Walker and his "Blood-Tubs" spent a year to accomplish by force of arms, failing even then to secure anything but a precarious retreat and the seeds of an assortment of tropical diseases, this Belly-full of Gascon impertinence has effected with no more formidable weapons than an oily tongue and a bag of napoleons. While the steamship gladiators in Wall street were giving each other the finishing stroke; while the venerable Cass was stepping off the effects of his diplomatic joust with Senor Yrisarri; while Senator Clingman and District Attorney [illegible]—the former with the county of Buncombe, North Carolina, at his back, and the latter with an Illinois Democratic Convention at his heels—were firing their "long toms" into the Clayton-Bulwer treaty; while the citizens of Mobile were brawling the triumph of the whipped-out Pirate of the Gulf; while Eli Thayer was weighing anchor for Fonseca Bay with a mixed cargo of steam engines, subsoil plows and school marms; while, in short, the Old Harry was to pay everywhere in view of the great equatorial mare's nest—this Gallic Belly, "like a full-acorned boar, a [illegible]" and vaults into the Dictatorship of three Republics.

The serious part of the humbug, (if it has a serious part) is that Mr. Belly has not the capacity to swallow the North American interests in the Transit route, fortified as they are by the Yrisarri treaty. Neither has Louis Napoleon, if he should happen to be behind his corpulent subject in the Central American adventure. Brother Jonathan has a few rights in that latitude which Frenchmen are bound to respect.

Trouble in Indiana—Illinois Interested.

A squad numbering fifty or more misguided men, occupants of land along the Calumet River, in Porter County, Indiana, attempted on Saturday night last to tear down and destroy the State Dam across that stream, at the head of the Feeder near Blue Island. The damage done was inconsiderable. The excuse urged by these Indianians for their lawlessness is, that the backing up of the water from the dam has caused the overflow of their lands. We assure them that they are engaged in an enterprise that is full of peril, and that the Trustees of the Illinois and Michigan Canal will protect their works, whatever the cost may be, and that the people of Blue Island will render them efficient assistance. This Calumet Feeder is a necessity to the successful operation of the Canal; it was built under an arrangement with Indiana that is legally binding on that State and Illinois; and these aggrieved parties who have been deluded by speculators into the purchase of land subject to inundation, must not inflict injury upon an important public work in pursuit of revenge. They threaten to return; and do their work more effectually. They will take our advice and seek a less perilous remedy.

Indiana—John G. Davis Thrown Overboard.

TERRE HAUTE, June 22, 1858.

Editor Ind. Journal: The Democratic Convention for the Seventh Congressional District, was held here to-day. Henry Secrest, of Putnam Co., was nominated on the first ballot. John G. Davis' name was not presented to the Convention. Parke County refused to cast her vote.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing the Administration and the English bill.

Resolutions, endorsing Douglas and the course of the Hon. John G. Davis were voted down. Much dissatisfaction prevails among the Anti-Lecompton men, and the probabilities are that another Convention will be called.

The Anti-Lecompton Democrats and Republicans will unite upon Davis and elect him over Secrest by a majority of thousands. Davis proved true and faithful, and acted with the Republicans all through the session. He spurned the English bill with scorn and contempt, and opposed the Lecompton iniquity at every step from the opening to the adjournment of Congress, and never gave out a doubtful word. He deserves well of his constituents, and popular sentiment demands his return to Congress. We hope the Republicans of the VIIth District will hesitate [illegible] to vote for him.

THE KING OF THE NICARAGUAS.—Gen. William Walker, the distinguished, ex-President, [illegible] "scotched not killed." He still lives and is moderately kicking. The telegraph has informed us that the wandering Greyson, and Mrs. [illegible], his good lady, Friday, were received by the citizens of Mobile with "extravagant demonstrations." Our Southern brethren are somewhat fond of these "demonstrations," but as a general thing they do not amount to anything. When a man has failed several times, so badly as to pay a percentage of nothing on the dollar, his friends are apt to become somewhat shy of trusting him. Now this happens unfortunately to be just the position of Gen. Walker, and although his adherents have certainly shelled out, in times past, much more liberally than could have been expected, we imagine that their hero's credit has been seriously impaired. It is all very fine to have a magnificent demonstration, even in warm weather, but asking the confidence that shall appeal to his deluded victims for further material aid in support of his expeditions, they will be very slow to present the shekels of silver and the shekels of gold. Sancho Panza long followed his master Don Quixote, but longed to leave him upon the Island which he had been promised [illegible] to be won.

A FAST MAN.—Wm. [illegible], of Washington county, Pa., recently lost his wife in the morning—married his second wife before night—and followed the remains of his first wife, in company with the second, to the grave the day after!

There is a discussion going on in New York touching the practicability of connecting that city with Brooklyn by means of a tunnel.

THE MOON'S ATMOSPHERE.—The Paris [illegible] announce that photographic experiments were made in France during the eclipse of the sun on the [illegible], which established the fact that the moon has an atmosphere of about [illegible] in height.

Lake Superior Trade and Travel.

Upon the opening of the Saint Mary Ship Canal a few years since, it was supposed that a thriving trade would spring up between Chicago and the different ports upon Lake Superior. It was proposed to erect iron manufactories here, to work up the rich ore of Marquette County, and it was hoped that a large portion of the grain, flour, groceries, and supplies generally, needed by the residents at the Iron and Copper mines would be sent from this city. Unfortunately, these pleasing anticipations have not been realized. On the contrary, the trade between Chicago and Lake Superior so far from increasing, has steadily diminished; and, whereas, three years ago, three or four steamers were constantly running from this city to Fond du Lac, at the present time a single steamer, running semi-monthly, has proved sufficient, and more than sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the public, since it has not once gone up fully freighted since the commencement of the season. The cause of this singular retrogression is to be looked for in the fact that nearly all the mines of the upper peninsula are owned by Eastern or Pennsylvania capitalists, whose interest it of course has been to direct the course of trade as far as possible into such channels as would prove most profitable to themselves. The necessity of action on the part of Chicago merchants in order to secure for themselves the benefits arising from their connection with new avenues of trade was much talked over, but in reality little or nothing was accomplished. As we are not of those who believe that lines of steamboats and railroads can be put in successful operation by the power of talking, we do not propose to say much upon this subject at the present time, farther than to express our regret that our former expectations have been disappointed as they have. But there is another feature of the case, with reference to which a few words in season may possibly do good. Not only has the quantity of material products sent from here to Lake Superior largely decreased, but the number of tourists and pleasure-seekers, who have been used annually to resort thither for relaxation and amusement, has largely decreased also.—It is certainly curious that Western travellers, in search of the romantic and picturesque, should willingly pass by the pleasures offered by a trip Northward, to go, by dusty railroads and in stifling cars to the fashionable and dreary watering-places of the Eastern States. To any one possessing a love for the beauties of nature, the attractions presented by the scenery of Lake Superior are absolutely unrivalled. The grandeur and beauty of the natural objects to be seen there, are not surpassed, either upon this continent or in the world. The tourist may wander amid the thousand islands of Saint Mary's river, or contemplate the laughing waters of Saint Mary's fall; he may gaze upon the calm beauty of Marquette Bay, or sail across the magnificent harbor of Isle Royale; climb some lofty mountain where the wind makes music in the pine tree's branches, or descend into the cavernous depths of the Cliff Mine; behold the gorgeous scenery of the Pictured Rocks, or stand beside the stately Monument—and he will everywhere see much to wonder at, and much to admire.

Alike to the pleasure-seeker and to the invalid, Lake Superior presents attractions which cannot be found elsewhere. To the former it offers boundless forests where the pheasant hides and the deer still lingers; purling streams which are filled with the choicest fish; and miniature lakes of marvellous beauty where he may bathe, row or sail at will. To the invalid it offers refreshing breezes, and pure cold water; woods whose balmy odors are redolent of health, and hills, whose air is life and inspiration. To one and all it offers a retreat from the bustle and busy care of city life, where one may indeed hold communion with Nature in her visible forms, without being severed from the ties and interests of society—a blessed spot, where, for a while, one may retire to look out

"From the loop-holes of retreat
On the great Babel and not feel its stir."

New Publications.

THE [illegible] WESTERN JOURNAL OF HOMOEOPATHY.—A Quarterly magazine; May 1858. Vol. I, No. 1. Chicago: Cowell & Halsey, 168 Clark street.

The first number of this medical journal contains articles upon the following subjects:—Illinois Endemics; Intermittents; Healing in Vorarlberg, (translated); Why reject the title "Homoeopathist," (translated); Intoxicating Drinks; Malaria; Medicus; Practical Queries; Medical Information; The uses and abuses of Authority; Proceedings of Societies; Miscellaneous; Report of Dispensaries; Notices of Colleges; Bibliographical Notices.

Many of these articles are intended for the scientific, rather than for the general reader, but several of them are very interesting even to the uninitiated. Generally, we may say that they are characterized by fairness and ability, and that while the "law" is very positively laid down, it is backed up by no small amount of "testimony." Among the more popular essays, we notice an able paper upon Intoxicating Drinks by L. S. Lord, M. D., which is an earnest and vigorous protest against the use of alcoholic stimulants in medical practice. He tells some hard truths, and discloses many stubborn facts. After arguing against the employment of pure liquors, he speaks of adulterated spirits, and gives a list of abominations, commonly used in their manufacture, which is striking enough to make an old toper stare. We commend his article to all who imagine that they are drinking the real, old, original Jacobs, even though the rest of the world may be grievously imposed upon. In attempting to account, however, for the large consumption of liquor in this country, Dr. Lord makes a rather huge statement:—

> For what is the distillery haunted? Why are its fires kept continually burning? Why do men hang around the saloons or plunge into beer cellars? What attracts them to the drug stores where brandy and wines [illegible] are sold at eight dollars a gallon? Why are the shelves of the grocers and druggists in these United States loaded down with two millions of bottles of [illegible]—christened Schiedam Schnapps, by [illegible] himself? Why do the great M. D.'s and the little M. D.'s and the no M. D.'s and the A—S. S. stand sponsors and godfathers to the [illegible] bantling.
> Is it not the people are sick and want medicine? Would any physician prescribe it for any other purpose, or recommend it if he did not think it useful? Will any man admit that he drinks for the love of man, the love of God, or the love of liquor? Of course not. Such an admission would bring down upon him the scorn and contempt, if not the malediction, of community. He would lose caste at once. He would be regarded as a man without character or reputation; a blasphemer, a reprobate, an ungodly sinner, whose touch would be contamination. No! no! intoxicating drinks have always been used, when used at all, as a medicine!!!

Now, we are inclined to think that there possibly may be men who sometimes take a glass of wine, not for the love of man, or the love of God, but certainly for the love of liquor. The expression of this singular idea however does not detract from the value of the remainder of the article which deserves to be widely read.

In its mechanical execution the first number of this magazine is not a very creditable specimen of Western publishing. In succeeding numbers we hope to witness an improvement in this regard.

HOW NOT TO DO IT.—Officers on the steamer Minnesota, sent to Shanghai to strike terror into the hearts of the Chinese, write home that she draws so much water they can't get within fifteen miles of port. All they see of Shanghai is done through the telescope. This illustrates the management of our Navy Department.—The perfection of our Postal system is apparent [illegible] that a boy at work in a shoe shop at Milford, recently found in an old mail bag, which the proprietor had purchased to work into shoes, a letter, which had been mailed at an office in Tennessee, and directed to another place in the same State, and which contained four fifty dollar bills, twenty, a ten, a five, and a three—in all, $[illegible].

"MUD-SILL" CLUB.—The San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle says: "We learn that a large number of Democrats in the Second District of this city are taking steps to organize a political club, under the name of the "Mud-sill Club." This club will doubtless be organized within the coming week. Some of the Douglas-Broderick men say they will have "Mud-sill" [illegible]

Hon. Abraham Lincoln and the Mexican War.

A Libel and its Refutation.

[From the Chicago Times, June 23.]

"We remember that on one occasion, some years ago, a bill was pending in the House of Representatives at Washington for the purchase of medicines and the employment of nurses to attend the sick and dying American soldiers in the hospitals and camps of hot and burning Mexico; when our suffering soldiers—the volunteers of Illinois and Indiana—the men who at Buena Vista had followed Hardin and Bissell, and who through the desert had accompanied Shields and Foreman—were crying out in their fever for cooling drinks and kind hands to minister to their dying wants; we know that when the bill to purchase these medicines, and furnish necessaries for the American soldiers who were sick and dying was pending, a "living dog" reared his ungainly person in the national councils, and in a yelping, barking tone, refused them succor! Let them die—Let them die, the men of Illinois, who fought over and rescued the dead body of Hardin, who echoed back the cheering call of Bissell, of Richardson, of Moore, of Harris, let them die. I, a "living dog" from the State of Illinois, refuse to send these men food, clothing or medicine. I, Abraham Lincoln, of Sangamon county, refuse to vote one dollar to feed, clothe or minister to the wants of the sick and dying volunteers from my own State, who are suffering in Mexico. Let them die like dogs! Let them die for want of medicine! Let the fever parched lips of my Illinois neighbors crack in painful agony—not one drop of cooling liquid shall soothe them if I can help it. What if they have served their country? What if they have encountered and beaten back an enemy thrice their own number? What if they do lie on damp grounds by night, and march in blistering sunlight by day? What if they have proved, every man of them, to be a Lion in his country's cause, I, Abraham Lincoln, am a living dog, and "a living dog is better than a dead lion."

[Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.]

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 24, 1858.

I see that the Chicago Times has made a savage and dangerous attack on Mr. Lincoln. The whole article, in its positive charges and negative ones, in what it says and in what it leaves its readers to infer, is false from beginning to end; it is false in fact—in innuendo; in its whole scope and spirit it is a lie, knowingly and falsely written and meanly uttered. The man who penned the article is a living evidence of Douglasism; he is a paid slanderer, hired to scribble falsehoods against better men than himself.

Mr. Lincoln did not enter Congress till December, 1847. General Scott was then in possession of the city of Mexico, and no specific bill was introduced into Congress for supplies during the Congressional year 1847; and if any such resolution, order, or law was introduced while Mr. Lincoln was in Congress, he voted for it.

If, however, the Times intends to lie down good men in this way there is one thing I am most certain of, and it is this: The people of Illinois will take the falsifier in hand when they see that honest men are to be stricken down at the behest of one whose whole course in Congress has been in favor of a breach of national faith—war in Kansas—polygamy in Utah, and despotism everywhere. Douglas seems to be an active partner in the general desolation business. This charge in the Times is made to sustain him; it will fail. But enough of this; I am in hopes that Mr. Lincoln will in due time come out, under his own hand, putting this thing—each and all these charges—in their proper light.* JUSTICE.

* We beg to be excused. Nobody cares a penny whether he voted for the supplies or against them. As Mr. Lincoln did not enter Congress until the war was finished, we don't see that anything further need be said.—[Ed.

Back Again.

[Correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.]

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 19, 1858.

An event possessing some significance in its way, as well as being auspicious to the City of Kansas and her visitors, is the recent repurchase of, and return of the "Eldridge Brothers" to the "American Hotel" of this place, from which the Kansas troubles induced them, in sorrow, to remove two years ago. It will be remembered that these gentlemen were the proprietors of the fine, magnificently furnished hotel at Lawrence, which was destroyed by the invaders. The term "American," in connection with the hotel in this city, which has ceased to be a term of political significance to the traveler, has given way to the more felicitous inscription of the "Eldridge House;" and the hotel will in future be known by that name—a name which has, on this part of the border, become a synonym for enterprise and liberality, and whenever found in connection with the proprietorship of a public house, ample guaranty for the politest attention, and all the comforts and luxuries which the country can afford.

The people of Kansas City, without party distinction, have ever regretted that paroxysm of sectional feeling, which drove the Eldridges from their midst; and now, have welcomed them back with an unanimity and cordiality of feeling, which show that the animosities that characterized the border feuds two years ago, (but which never ran high with the people of this city,) have been buried forever.

The decline of the "American Hotel," subsequent to its former sale by the Eldridges, and the absence, until recently, of any other first class house, has given visitors to this city an unfavorable impression in regard to its facilities for public entertainment, which operated temporarily, to give other places on the Missouri, with better conducted public houses, undue importance as points of disembarkation. These causes exist no longer. The "Eldridge House," in this city, which has just been thoroughly repaired and newly furnished, is now one of the best houses on the border, being conducted in a manner fully sustaining the reputation which the liberal proprietors have so justly achieved.

The Eldridges also run from this house two daily lines of "Concord coaches," up the Kansas Valley, on either side of the river, to Lawrence, and points further West.

I have written thus much on this subject, more in justice to and for the information of the emigrant and traveler journeying to the mouth of the Kansas, than with a design to pass a compliment, however deserved, upon the proprietors of the "Eldridge House." O.

Col. Eldridge's Return to Kansas City—Re-opening of the Eldridge House.

KANSAS CITY, June 19, 1858.

It is a pleasure to announce that we are at last relieved of another legacy of "border ruffianism." A lingering abomination that has clung to us tighter than "original sin" ever since the brave old days of whisky ascendancy, when the pious Buford prayed o' nights on the levee, and his drunken recruits applauded. I allude to the recent "extinction" of the "American Hotel" in our city. It has been "cleaned out" by an invasion from Lawrence; though not in the graphic acceptation of border usage. After an absence of about two years, the "Eldridge Brothers" have returned and resumed possession of the house which they formerly made famous as the head-quarters of the "Emigrant Aid Society" and the most deservedly popular hotel in Western Missouri.

The old name of the "American Hotel," around which gather so many varied associations, has been changed, and under new auspices the hotel will be more favorably known as the "Eldridge House."

Gen. T. B. Eldridge, who will have the immediate superintendence of the house, took possession about the 1st inst. He had no sooner arrived than he precipitately closed the doors and put the establishment under a vigorous course of water cure. After a fortnight's incessant scrubbing the "Eldridge House" has emerged from the mass of filth and vermin that constituted for two years our largest and worst hotel, newly arranged, and furnished throughout. It is freshly painted, papered, carpeted, and above all, thoroughly cleaned, and now presents a very comfortable and inviting appearance.

The Eldridge Brothers are too well known to travelers in these regions, as excellent hotel keepers and energetic business men, to require any special encomiums here. Two of the firm reside in Lawrence, and are proprietors of the "Eldridge House" and "Morrow House" in that city. The third brother, who has hitherto had charge of the hotel in Wyandott, has removed here. Kansas City can now boast of at least two excellent hotels—the "Union Hotel" (recently opened) and the "Eldridge House," though the latter will perhaps be generally preferred on account of its convenient location on the levee and the reputation of its popular proprietors.

The Messrs. Eldridge are the proprietors of a line of splendid Concord coaches, which leave Kansas City daily for all parts of the Territory. It has always been admitted, since the first opening of the Territory, that Kansas City was the proper point of disembarkation for at least all that part of Kansas Territory lying south of the Kaw River. This reason induced the purchase of the "American Hotel" by the Emigrant Aid Society, who afterwards sold out to Col. Eldridge. Since the time that the Col. felt compelled, by the disturbances, to remove from our town, until quite lately, we have felt most deplorably the want of a good hotel, while other towns on the border, of [illegible] business importance and less favorably located, have in this important item of hotels been more fortunate. However, with the acquisition of the "Eldridge House" and "Union Hotel," we hope also to regain [illegible] a reputation for "taking in strangers" [illegible] after the fashion of [illegible], than has hitherto been the theory and practice at the [illegible]

Trial of Gen. James H. Lane, for the Murder of Gaius Jenkins.

Fifth Day's Proceedings.

Evidence for the Defence.

[Special Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.]

LAWRENCE, K. T., Friday, June 18, 1858.

(Before Judge Lane—assisted by Justices [illegible]. Counsel for the Prosecution—Messrs. [illegible]. Counsel for Defendant—Messrs. [illegible] T. Ewing, J. [illegible], [illegible], E. Ewing.)

EDWARD MORROW, sworn—I am acquainted with Ray Greene; saw him very soon after the occurrence, both on the street and at Jenkins' house; at the latter place on the day of the killing he said they went to Lane's house armed, and commenced cutting down the gate; that Lane came out and threatened to shoot if they cut down the gate; that Lane retreated to his house, came out with a gun, and repeated his threat to shoot if they advanced; Jenkins raised his axe (after breaking down the gate) and said, "Let's rush on the d—d villain and kill him;" that he snapped the trigger of his pistol twice, but the cap missed; and furthermore, that if his (Greene's) pistol had gone off, Lane would not have shot Jenkins; Greene said that Jenkins had the axe raised when Lane shot; this statement he made not only to me, but to a crowd; this declaration was about half an hour after the occurrence; I noticed Jenkins' body after death; the face had been washed; it bore a sort of scowl; I thought it indicated either anger or pain.

Cross-examined—I am an intimate friend of Gen. Lane; have talked with him but once since the occurrence about it; at the time of Greene's statement there were present in the crowd Chas. Dyer, Charley Olmsted, and, I think, Samuel Fry; can't mention any others; there were fifteen or twenty present beside; I did say that Greene said Jenkins had the axe raised at the time he was shot; he did not say raised to strike, but I supposed so of course; had no conversation with Greene that day when I saw him in town; heard him say Jenkins had just been shot, and he feared killed; he said that Jenkins' party were all armed; that they had Colt's revolvers and one Sharpe's rifle; there were two or three excited persons in the crowd in favor of hanging Lane.

P. J. STEVENS, sworn. About an hour after the shooting, Mr. Greene came and borrowed a bucket of me; I asked him if Mr. Jenkins was dead; he said no; I asked who shot Gen. Lane; he said that he fired three shots, fired at him, and he believed his shots took effect; he also said that he could not be wrought upon to shoot any person for any other man than Jenkins; also, that if his pistol had gone off Lane would not have shot Jenkins.

Cross-examined: Don't think I am at all mistaken as to the expression of Greene; I have a very distinct knowledge of the impression he intended to convey; did not understand him to say simply that Lane would not have got into his house alive if his pistol had gone off; am positive that he did not say that; the expression was that Lane would not have shot Jenkins if his (Greene's) pistol had gone off; I had some conversation with Lane on the evening of the occurrence, and some little since; Greene said three shots were fired by his party at Lane; knew Jenkins was dead when Greene told me he was not, for I had seen the corpse; I was, I think, the fourth person that arrived after his body had been removed to the house; life was not then quite extinct, for I saw a movement of the muscles; there was no person present when Greene said that if his pistol had gone off, Lane would not have shot Jenkins; my wife was standing near when he said that Jenkins was not yet dead; don't know whether she heard it or not.

S. Stewart, G. M. Embry, A. J. McClough and A. J. Totten testified to the material points in the evidence above.

JAMES F. WALKER sworn.—Know Col. Jenkins, and know Gen. Lane; heard Jenkins make threats against Gen. Lane during the claim trial at Lecompton; he said that if Lane got the claim he never should occupy it; this statement was made while conversing about the claim trial; he also stated that as soon as the trial was over, he would put Lane out of the house; have heard him say, on several occasions, that he ought to kill Lane; never heard him say that he would kill him; I lived in the house known as the Cincinnati House since November, 1857, till the present spring; there was not then an abundant supply of water at the well; therefore I was on several occasions to stop the neighbors from getting water at the well; I occasionally stopped them a day or two, and four times for a week. I stopped Mr. Jenkins' family with the rest; I visited the house of Gen. Lane; the General made his home with me all the time I was there; there is a picket fence about the house enclosing the well.

R. D. NICHOLS sworn: On the 26th of May I met Jenkins, and he said that if I would be true to him, I would not lose anything by it, that if he caught Lane on the claim he would take him by the nape of the neck, and throw him off again; about a week before I moved away, he said that he wanted me to get Lane out before I left; I said that I could not, that I had no right to; he appeared very mad at this, he then said that if I left him there he would get him off dead or alive; I told Gen. Lane of these threats; the day before I left I told him that he was not safe on the claim alone, that I thought he would be killed; I don't think I told Lane before the tragedy, of the particular threat that Jenkins said he intended to have him off the claim dead or alive; but I communicated the substance of all these threats, to him before the affray.

Court adjourned.

Sixth Day's Proceedings.

LAWRENCE, June 19, 1858.

At the opening of the Court, a lease was introduced in evidence, drawn by Jenkins in favor of Mr. Nichols.

SAMUEL WALKER, Sheriff of Douglas county, sworn: Knew Gaius Jenkins, now deceased; saw him on the day he was shot, about one hour before the occurrence; thought he was in liquor; saw him drinking twice that forenoon; don't know positively, however, that he was drinking liquor; was the first who arrived at Lane's house after the occurrence; found him lying on his wounded leg with a handkerchief; told him at once that he would have to consider himself under arrest; asked him the whereabouts of the men who shot him; he said that they had gone over to Jenkin's house; went over and found three men at Jenkin's stable, and asked who was with Jenkins when he was shot. A tall man with a black mustache, whose name I did not then know, said he was; he said that if his pistol had gone off Lane would not have shot Jenkins; I then said, "That puts another face on the whole affair, and that he, too, must consider himself under arrest." I asked what they went there for with pistols; he said, "By G—! we went there for a fight if we couldn't get the water;" asked if Lane did not tell them not to come into the yard; they said that he did, in reply to my question, but that they did not think Lane would shoot—that they thought he would back down as there were four of them. That was about all that was said. I had not a writ then, but they said that they would not leave; a writ was subsequently issued and given to a constable to serve; have since ascertained that the name of the tall man is Greene.

Cross-Examined: Think it was the next to the smallest of the three who said it was a pity that they had not shot Lane in the head instead of the leg; I used the word "pistols," not "pistol," when I asked what they went over for; they said that they all went armed; am sure that the young man who wished that he had shot Lane in the head instead of the leg, did not use the third person, but the first person singular, as if he himself had shot him.

REUBEN F. GATES sworn: Testified to the main facts connected with the shooting with the following additions: Was on the south side of the yard, close to the fence, about 75 feet from Gen. Lane and 90 or 95 feet from Jenkins. Jenkins came through the gate, telling his son to come on; Lane met him, and told him not to advance; Jenkins made some reply; don't remember exactly what; he still advanced towards Lane; Lane told him to stop; Jenkins still advanced, he had his axe drawn up, his men at the right; Lane retreated towards his door, and brought up his gun; in the meantime, there were two reports; Lane still fell back towards his door; motioned them off, and again threatened to shoot; he then took sight on his gun, and fired; Jenkins fell forward on his face; Lane received three shots, that is, there were three reports; the two reports were before Lane fell back and fired; Jenkins' party then fell back; Greene came in with Jenkins into the yard; three men were armed; three of them had revolvers; two of them after Jenkins was shot, fell back to the gate and fired a gun; don't know where they got the gun; don't know whether the shot, before or after Lane fired, took effect on him; I stood still for a minute, then went to Jenkins' body; found the axe that he had in his hand five or six feet from his body; [illegible] saying something about having Lane out of that; that he had "waked up the wrong passenger;" two of the reports, the first I took merely for explosions of caps, the third sounded like the discharge of a revolver; I stated that the time of the affray was the fourth time that the gate was broken down.

The Court adjourned until Monday at eight A. M.

What Greeley says on Advance Pay.

The four leading journals of Chicago have adopted the Cash System with regard to subscriptions. Henceforth, no name will be entered on their books unless it be accompanied by cash, and whenever the cash shall have run out, the paper will stop unless or until more cash is forthcoming. In fact, The Times has already been conducted on this system for the last two years, and with most satisfactory results. It is amazing that any journal any where should be conducted on any other than the Cash System. Credit is the inveterate scourge of American newspapers, being utterly unknown to any other. Two-thirds of our newspaper men who have been twenty years or more in the business, have enough due them from delinquent patrons, to make them comfortable for the rest of their days; yet they will never see ten per cent. of it, while a good many of them will be bothered to raise the requisite dimes wherewith to celebrate the approaching 4th of July. By the way, unhappy brethren of the Credit Press, why not commemorate the next anniversary of National Independence by cutting loose from the sharks who eat up your substance? Just proclaim on that day that no man can have your paper thenceforth unless he shall have paid for it, and you will have reason to bless the day and the deed evermore.

Whenever the Press shall have purged itself of the Credit System, it will be ready to help overthrow Mercantile Credit—a system which enables rogues and drones to live uselessly and often fare sumptuously at the cost of honest, industrious people. Whenever Pay Down shall be the general rule in buying goods, their average cost to consumers will be reduced at least ten per cent. And why should those who pay bear a tax of ten per cent. on their earnings for the benefit of those who never pay? Tell us why!—N. Y. Tribune.

From Cairo.

[Correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.]

CAIRO, June 22, 1858.

The Mississippi is falling fast at this point, but the Ohio is still exactly at a stand, as it has been for the past forty-eight hours. It is undoubtedly running off, as the drift has all been running close to the centre line of the river during yesterday and last night, but there is such a vast space of country to drain, that no fall is as yet perceptible. The Wm. Dickson reports another rise in Tennessee river, and the Ohio was rising at Paducah last night. We hear nothing from the other rivers. The weather has been clear and warm.

There is no change of importance in the condition of Cairo, except that two or three houses in the upper part of the town have been turned over or floated off, and large quantities of logs and other stuff were got out through the [illegible] during yesterday. The water inside is still [illegible], although still running out at the [illegible], and also into the Ohio, for a space of [illegible] feet, over the Levee at Williams' Mill.

The present flood is certainly unprecedented. The oldest inhabitant of Pulaski County reports it ten inches higher than ever before and the old house at the mouth of the Cache River, which was set up on piles so high that it was supposed no possible flood could reach it, has the water over the floor. At Mound City they have been compelled to put a new false floor in the Shelton House, as the water is two feet deep on the hotel floor. In front of the Shelton House the depth is fully four feet, and the average depth over the site cannot be less than four feet.

The Cairo and Fulton Railroad (of Missouri) is a foot and a-half under water, and is gullied out in several places. The Chief Engineer estimates that it will take two months to repair the damages.

On the Kentucky side, the bottoms are entirely overflowed, and the crops are all destroyed. This, however, is all the damage, as the stock has all been driven to the highlands, and the people and their household furniture are safe.

The effluvia arising from the water inside the levees, and from the filth which is daily accumulating upon the levees, is getting very strong, and begets serious apprehensions of sickness, even after the river falls.

What our Imaginary Southern Pacific Railroad Costs.

The Albany Journal says that it may not be generally known that we are building a Pacific railroad. It is rather an airy, unsubstantial structure, the rails being laid nowhere except in the imagination; but it has already cost us a good deal of money.

The road was begun about four years ago. As our Government is a Government which legislates always for the South, and never for the North, it was a foregone conclusion that the railroad must be a Southern railroad. It must connect with Charleston and Mobile, instead of New York or Philadelphia, and must link the States which talk of forming a Southern Confederacy to California and the Pacific coast.

We began by sending out a corps of army officers to survey the Southern route. The first route they surveyed was a route through Texas. The second route they surveyed was a route through Texas. The third route they surveyed was a route through Texas. And so on to the end of the chapter—every one of the dozen routes, with but one or two exceptions, being a route through Texas. This Texas engineering took out of the Treasury about $1,000,000. The printing of the survey cost $750,000; the Gadsden purchase, consisting of sandy desert, agreeably diversified with rocks too barren of vegetation for the most part to support a field mouse—all for the moderate sum of $10,000,000; a wagon road $150,000; the camels from the East $250,000, and the Artesian wells along the route, $500,000. Grand total $13,000,000.

A Sad Casualty—Father Gallagher Drowned.

[From the Elgin (Ill.) Gazette, June 19.]

Last Sunday evening, soon after Father Gallagher had performed his weekly duties to his flock, and attended to the religious services of the Sabbath at his church, he, in company with a brother clergyman from Chicago, went up the river in a small sail-boat, for the purpose of enjoying a short ride upon the water, which Mr. Gallagher was wont to do, as he owned a boat and lived near the river. He went up the river towards the dam, and ventured so near it, that the boat got into the strong reverse current and was instantly drawn under the falls.

The boat struck a projecting timber and was dashed to pieces. The gentleman from Chicago clung to the wreck, and was carried with it down the stream several rods to a sand bar, where he recovered sufficiently to stand until another boat went to his rescue and saved him. Gallagher was not seen again. It was supposed he was drawn under the fall and kept there by the motion of the water fall or by something with which he got entangled.

Sunday night was spent in efforts for the body, but in vain. On Monday, a large number of our citizens went to the scene, and endeavored, by firing cannon, dragging, and in every way that could be devised, to make the recovery; but all proved useless.

P. S.—Since writing the above, the body of Father Gallagher has been found. It was seen at St. Charles, going over the dam, on Thursday morning, and an effort was immediately made to recover it. Success followed a diligent search, and the body was brought to this city on Thursday afternoon.

Incident at Elizabeth.

[Correspondence of the Galena Advertiser.]

ELIZABETH, Ill., June 14, 1858.

Last evening, about 9 o'clock, a fine, sprightly boy, about six years old, son of Mr. Burris, was missing. His parents and the immediate neighbors searched for him until a late hour. The bell of our school-house was then rung, the village aroused, and the remainder of the night spent in an unavailing search of a neighboring wood, where it was thought he had been traced. At early dawn the alarm was again sounded, and the inhabitants met at the school-house, and resolved to prosecute the search and that all business should be suspended until the child was found.

A party of active, energetic miners, volunteered to search some old, deep shafts, about which the children were known to frequent, while the balance were detailed to examine the vicinity around. A windlass and rope was procured, and a bold, active young miner descended, at much peril, a deep shaft, at the bottom of which was some ten or fifteen feet of water. An iron rod was procured, and the bottom searched without finding the child. The windlass was removed to another shaft. A brave, strong miner descended eighty-four feet, when, behold! there lay the object of his search. He took him in his arms, gave the signal, and in a moment they were safely landed at the top. The afflicted father seizes his child in his arms, and tears of joy burst from his overflowing heart. He was quickly conveyed home to the fond embrace of an overjoyed mother.

His injuries, it is thought by his physicians, are not serious. It is almost incredible that a child should fall into a shaft eighty-four feet deep, and not be instantly killed! There was a drift connecting another shaft, which afforded good air. OLD MINER.

P. S.—Since writing the above, another sad occurrence has taken place. A young man by the name of Kellogg, who was here on a visit to see his brother, while bathing in Apple River in company with him, from some cause unknown sank to the bottom and was drowned. Much labor was spent before the body was found, but eventually the search was successful, and his remains have been deposited in the grave.

Mutiny on Board a French Slaver.—Two Hundred and Fifty Negroes Massacred.

[From the London Times.]

PLYMOUTH, Sunday, June 7, 1858.

The African Steam Navigation Company's packet Ethiope, Commander Croft, arrived at midnight with later advices from the West Coast of Africa.

In consequence of information received at Monrovia, Commander Croft left in the Ethiope on the 14th of April, and on the 15th fell in with the French ship Coeli Regina, 420 tons, in possession of a large number of negroes who were not able to manage her. After a parley, the second officer of the Ethiope went on board, when about 250 of the negroes swam to the shore, where nearly the whole were murdered by the captain of the French ship and the natives. It appears that the Coeli Regina, which is completely fitted for the slave trade, had been cruising for a month near Cape Palmas, and, under pretence of taking them to a better place, had secured 500 negroes, who were immediately placed between decks, many of them in irons. When the captain (Simon) was ashore, and part of the crew in a boat alongside, the negroes procured fire-arms, and shot all but the doctor and two of the seamen, whom they retained to steer the ship. Capt. Simon came within gun-shot several times afterward, but was not allowed to go on board. The Coeli Regina was towed into Monrovia, where she was left in the possession of the purser of the Ethiope.

DAILY TRIBUNE.

SATURDAY MORNING.........JUNE 26.

The Last Stroke of Fortune.

Thirty years ago, an old house was standing in the city of Cologne, which showed to the street a frontage of five small windows. It was the house in which the first painter of the Flemish shool, the immortal Rubens, was born, A.D. 1577. Sixty years later than this date, the ground floor was occupied by two old people, a shoemaker and his wife. The upper story, which was usually let to lodgers, was empty at the time we write of. Two, however occupied the garret. The evening was cold and wet, and the shoemaker and his wife were sitting together in the room below.

"You had better go up stairs again," said the man to his wife, "and see how the poor lady is. The old gentleman went out early, and has not been in since. Has she not taked anything?"

"It is only half an hour since I was up stairs, and he had not come in. I took her some broth up at noon, but she hardly touched it, and I was up again at three; she was asleep then, and at five she said she should not want anything more."

"Poor lady! this time of year, and neither fire nor warm clothes, and not even a decent bed to lie on; and yet I am sure she is somebody or other. Have you noticed the respect with which the old gentleman treats her?"

"If she wants for anything, it is her own fault. That ring she wears on her finger would get her the best of everything."

Then came a knock at the door, and the woman admitted the old man they had just spoken of, whose grizzled beard fell down upon his tarnished velvet coat. The hostess sadly wanted to have a little gossip with him, but he passed by, and, bidding them a short "good night," groped his way up the steep and crooked staircase. On entering the chamber above, a feeble voice inquired the cause of his long absence.

"I could not help it," he said; "I had been copying manuscript, and as I was on my way here a servant met me, who was to fetch me to raise the horoscope of two ladies who were passing through; they were ladies whom I have known before. I thought I could get a little money to pay for some simples which will be of service to you."

"I am cold."

"It is fever cold. I will make you something which you must take directly."

The flame of a small tin lamp sufficed to heat some water, and the patient, having taken what the old man had provided, was diligently covered up by him with all the clothes and articles of dress he could find. He stood by her motionless till he perceived that she was fast asleep, and indeed long after; he then retired into a small closet, and sought repose on the hard floor.

The next morning the lady was so much better that her attendant proposed she should endeavor to leave the house for a moment or two, and he succeeded in getting her forth as far as the Place St. Cecilia. It was seldom that she left the house, for, notwithstanding the meanness of her dress, there was that about her carriage which rendered it difficult to avoid unpleasant observation.

"Do you see that person yonder?" she said suddenly. "If I am not much mistaken it is certainly the Duke of Guise."

The stranger's attention had also been attracted, and he had now approached them.

"Parbleu!" said he, "why that is Mascall. What, are you married?"

Mascall had, however, whispered a single word in the Duke's ear, and he started as if struck by a thunderbolt; but instantly recovering himself, he hastily uncovered, and bowed nearly to the ground.

"I beg your forgiveness," he said; "but my eyes have grown so weak, and I could so little expect to have the honor of meeting your——"

"For the love of God," interrupted the lady, hastily, "name me not here. A title would too strangely contrast with my present circumstances. Have you been long in Cologne?"

"Three days. I am on my way from Italy. I took refuge there when our common enemy drove me forth, and confiscated all my earthly goods. I am going to Brussels."

"And what are your advices from France? Is the helm still in the hands of that wretched caitiff?"

"He is in the zenith of his power."

"See, my lord duke, your fortunes and mine own are much alike. You the son of a man who had he not too much despised danger, might well have set the crown on his own head and I, once the Queen of the mightiest nation in the universe, and now both of us alike. But adieu," she said suddenly, and, drawing herself up, "the sight of you, my lord duke, has refreshed me much, and I pray that fortune once more may smile upon our steps."

"Permit me to attend your majesty to——"

A slight color tinged the lady's features, as she answered, with a gently commanding tone:

"Leave us, my lord duke, it is our pleasure."

Guise bowed low, and taking the lady's hand, he pressed it reverently to his lips. At the corner of the street he met some one, to whom he pointed out the old lady, and then hastened away.

The next morning a knock at the door announced a person inquiring for Monsieur Mascall, who had a small packet for him, and also a billet. Inside this was distinctly written:

"Two hundred louis d'ors constitute the whole of my present fortune; one hundred I send for your use. GUISE."

And the packet contained a hundred louis d'ors.

The sum thus obtained was sufficient to supply the wants of the pair two long years. But the last louis had been changed, and the lady and her companion were still without friendly succor. The shoemaker and his wife had undertaken a journey to Aix la Chapelle, to take up some small legacy. It was the 13th February, 1642. A low sound of moaning might have been heard issuing from the garret; a withered female form, more like a skeleton than a thing of flesh and blood, was lying on a wretched bed of straw, in the agonies of death. The moans grew more and more indistinct; a slight rattling in the throat was at length the only audible sound, and this also ceased. An hour later an old man, dressed in rags and tatters, entered the chamber. One only word had escaped his lips as he tumbled up the falling staircase—"Nothing! Nothing!" He drew near the bed listlessly, but in a moment he seized an arm of the corpse with an almost convulsive motion, and, letting it suddenly fall, he cried—

"Dead, Dead, of hunger, cold and starvation!"

And this lady was Mary of Medicis, wife of Henry IV., Queen Regent of France, mother of Louis XIII., of Isabella, Queen of Spain, of Henrietta, Queen of England, of Christine, Duchess of Savoy, of Gaston, Duke of Orleans—dead of hunger, cold and misery and yet Louis XIII., the cowardly tool of Richelieu, his mother's murderer, is still called "the Just."

A Romantic and Pathetic Story of Real Life.

The Cleveland Herald relates the following affecting narrative, which is represented to be no less true than strange:

"We yesterday learned the denouement of a painful story, equal to the most thrilling romance in interest, but with the circumstances and actors of which we were personally well acquainted.

"Some twelve years ago, two young men, named Clyma and Paull, lived in a small village not far from the sea coast, in the extreme west of England. Both were miners and workers in the same mine near the village. Both paid their addresses to the same maiden, though not with equal success. Clyma prospered so well in his suit that a day was appointed for the nuptials, and in due course the banns of marriage were asked in the village church on the first of the three Sundays prescribed by the English canon law.

"Before the second Sunday came round, the rivals met at a wrestling match in the village, and it chanced that the turn came for them to wrestle together. Paull was excited, and endeavored to give his successful rival in love a 'wicked fall,' but his eagerness worked his defeat. He was thrown to the ground amid the shouts of the villagers. On springing to his feet he swore that he would be revenged, and that Clyma should never marry his intended bride. From that day he took to drinking deeply, and hurled imprecations on his rival.

"The day before that fixed for the marriage, Paull told all his acquaintances that he would be at the wedding, and would find means to prevent its taking place. Knowing his determined character, Clyma appeared alarmed at the threat, and got some friends to intercede with Paull, but in vain.

"Late that night, Clyma left the house of his intended bride for his own cottage. The way lay across a patch of barren moor where there were several open mine shafts, which had been deserted, and the bottoms of whose black depths were now covered with several fathoms of water. About the same hour Paull was seen crossing to the same patch of moor from another direction. A miner, who passed a little later toward the mine where he worked—it being his turn for night work—averred the next day that he heard a noise as if of a dispute and scuffle, but it was too dark to distinguish any one.

"The marriage was to take place at 11 o'clock in the morning at the village church. Long before that hour the village was the scene of great excitement. The hat and handkerchief of Paull—the latter all torn and bloody—had been found near the deepest of the abandoned pitshafts, and of Paull himself nothing could be found, nor had he been seen since he went toward the moor on the preceding night. The ground where the articles had been found bore traces of a terrible having taken place, and to crown the whole, two buttons recognized as belonging to Clyma's coat were discovered among the earth and stones. To these damning facts Clyma could only reply that he had met Paull at the place mentioned, during the night; that high words were followed by a scuffle; and that he had beaten Paull who had retired cursing him.

"This account was not considered satisfactory, and Clyma was taken into custody to await further developments. Several days passed away—an examination was made of the pit and the surrounding locality, but no trace could be found of the body. It was argued, however, that if a stone was attached to the body before it was thrown into the pit, so as to sink it, there would be no probability of its ever being found. After several examinations before a magistrate, the accused was released from custody, but only to be shunned as a murderer by the whole community. In the mean time the intended bride became sick through excitement; a violent fever was succeeded by a wasting illness, and after lingering some months, she died of a broken heart. These accumulated ills were too much for the unhappy object of general suspicion, and in less than twelve months after what should have been his wedding day, he became the inmate of an insane asylum, where he still remains a hopeless lunatic.

"Among the relatives of Clyma was a sister, married to a farmer who, two or three years after the unhappy occurrences related above, removed to this country and settled down on a farm in northern Illinois. About ten days since, this sister, while about taking the cars in Chicago for home, suddenly encountered the supposed murdered man! Her excitement was intense. Drawing him on one side, she made herself known to Paull, and was immediately recognized by him. The explanation given by him of his disappearance was, that he had met Clyma on the eventful night with the purpose of beating and disfiguring him so that he could not be married on the succeeding day, but that his rival was more than a match for him. Burning with rage at his discomfiture, he had rushed off without knowing or caring what became of himself, and, on reaching the beach, had taken an old leaky boat and pulled directly out to sea. Next morning, when the boat was nearly sinking, he was picked up by an outward-bound ship, which took him to New Orleans. Since then he had resided several years in California and in the United States, had become moderately rich, and was now on his way to his native home, with which he had maintained no communication since his abrupt departure. On learning the sad events which had occurred in the meantime he immediately accompanied the sister to her home in Illinois, and, after the necessary arrangements were made, he started with her for England, in order to repair, as far as possible, the mischief which had been done. They passed through Cleveland last evening on their way east, and, happening accidentally to meet them at the depot, we learned the sequel to the sad story, with the earlier portions of which we were already acquainted.

"They go on a joyful yet mournful errand. The good name of the unhappy condemned can be reclaimed, but none can restore his shattered reason, or rescue the broken-hearted dead from her early grave."

CHICAGO WHOLESALE MARKET.

Office of the Chicago Daily Tribune, Friday Evening, June 25, 1858.

A feeling of heaviness characterized the wheat market at the opening of 'Change, at a decline of one cent from closing figures of last evening, and notwithstanding the telegraphic dispatches from New York quoted the market there as buoyant, the improvement was but trifling. In the afternoon offers of cargoes at 66c on board for all next week, buyers option, were not unfrequent, and though well aware that such offers go but a little way in determining the market price for next week, yet we mention the fact to show the feeling of distrust that prevails among a certain class of operators.

Corn is without change, and purchases were made with unusual quietness.

Oats were firm and in good demand. Sales to complete cargoes made at half a cent more than was paid yesterday.

Rye and Barley are without change.

Flour pursues the even tenor of its way, and sales continue light.

Six tons of broom corn were sold to-day at $45 per ton. Live chickens are very plenty and lower. Sales of 25 tons of middlings are reported at $23 per ton delivered. Eggs are in good supply and lower, sales of fresh having been made at 7c. Hides are firm at quoted prices. 500 lbs of ½ blood wool was sold to-day at 28c. Sales of dry flint hides are reported at $14, 50 per 100 lbs. 27 bbls good country tallow were sold this morning at 9½c. Highwines are lower and sales are reported at 20c. Country are dull at 7c.

Lake freights remain firm with the following charters reported: Dardanelles, wheat to Buffalo at 5c; Monticello, Wings of the Wind, and James Navah corn to Oswego at 7 1-2c; Grass same cargo to same port chartered last evening at 7c J. B. Kirtland to Buffalo at 4 1-2 for wheat, or to Oswego at 7 1-2 for corn, shippers option.

The receipts for the day are; Flour, 849 bbls; Wheat, 30,714 bus; Corn, 67,576 bus; Barley, 466 bus; Rye, 240 bus; Potatoes, 1,212 bus; Hides, 9,180 lbs; Provisions, 4,500 lbs; Highwines, 100 bbls; Cattle, 180; Hogs, 350; Sheep, 600; Lumber, 1,990,867 ft; Shingles, 1,406,500; Lath, 562,000; Wood, 755 cords; Salt, 300 bbls; Fish, 770 bbls.

The shipments are: Flour, 2,679 bbls; Wheat, 15,5[illegible] bus; Corn, 63,893 bus; Oats, 48,000 bus; Hides, 7,000 lbs.
